Taxation

I always pay my taxes, such as back taxes and real estate tax, on time. Paying taxes is important, because taxes maintain our welfare state. Paying taxes is an important civic duty. You can trust the Tax Administration. The Tax Administration gives advice that helps people act right. The Tax Administration is effective in controlling how people report their income and pay taxes. The Tax Administration should be given more resources to combat the shadow economy. I am happy to pay my taxes. I think I get my money's worth when paying taxes. The Tax Administration takes swift action on tax offences. The Tax Administration's processes are inflexible and bureaucratic. I would like for all my taxation to happen automatically, in a way that would require no actions on my part. The competition between companies is distorted because of the shadow economy. I know or know of a person who has bought goods or services without receipts. I feel that too many people hide some of their income. The Tax Administration has considered its actions from the taxpayer's point of view. I would find it hard to approve if my friend or relative were to buy goods or services without a receipt. I would be happy to pay a little more taxes if I knew that the money was spent on things that I value. I am often angry or frustrated that I have to pay so much in taxes. I feel that it is my right to delay the payment of my taxes, such as back taxes or real estate taxes, if my financial situation requires it. The Tax Administration too often operates in an overly controlling manner. It is easy to avoid taxes. I could leave some of my income unreported, if the risk of getting caught was small. I think there is nothing wrong in doing unreported work or buying services without receipt.
