An extension of time to file can only be granted for a good reason. Unexpected circumstances may constitute such a reason. However, to merely refer to 'a busy time at work', 'problems with the computer system', 'business travel' and 'vacations' is not acceptable. Similarly, no extension can be given for a delay with the auditors' work on the financial statements, for the fact that the Annual General Meeting has not been held, or because a director with the right to sign for the company has not been reached for authorizing the tax return with his signature.
